Who It Is For

---

-  People who cook large breakfasts outdoors
-  Backyard hosts preparing multiple dishes simultaneously
-  Campers or tailgaters with propane supply

Who It Is Not For

---

-  Apartment dwellers without outdoor propane access
-  Grillers wanting open-flame sear marks
-  Travelers needing compact lightweight stove

Trade Offs to Consider

---

-  Large footprint needs substantial storage space
-  Assembly required before first use
-  Propane only no electric option
-  Carbon steel requires seasoning and care

How It Compares

---

-  Larger cooking area than single-burner camp stoves
-  Less open-flame sear than charcoal grills
-  Simpler controls than commercial multi-zone griddles

Choose This If...

- ✓ You cook for groups outdoors regularly
- ✓ You prefer flat-top cooking for breakfast items
- ✓ You have propane and storage space

Skip This If...

- ✗ You need high-heat grill searing
- ✗ You lack outdoor propane or ventilation
- ✗ You need an ultra-portable compact stove
