Who It Is For

-  Families hosting medium to large gatherings
-  Home cooks who use multiple burners and griddle
-  Owners wanting a freestanding outdoor kitchen island
-  Buyers who start with propane and may convert

Who It Is Not For

-  People needing a compact portable grill
-  Buyers unwilling to assemble a heavy unit
-  Those planning a built-in permanent installation
-  Users who only want charcoal or electric grills

Trade Offs to Consider

-  Large footprint requires ample outdoor space
-  Assembly required and can be time consuming
-  Natural gas conversion kit sold separately
-  Cast iron grates need routine maintenance

Users Say

● POSITIVES

- ✓ Handles multiple dishes simultaneously
- ✓ Side burner and griddle add cooking options
- ✓ Built-in thermometer and warming rack useful

● COMPLAINTS

- ⚠ Assembly complexity and long setup time
- ⚠ Delivered in two boxes complicates logistics
- ⚠ Optional conversion kit increases total cost

How It Compares

- Vs 2-burner portable: larger cooking area less portable
- Vs built-in island: freestanding easier to relocate
- Vs charcoal grill: faster heat control and ignition
- Vs larger premium islands: fewer burners less cabinet space

Choose This If...

- ✓ You need 4 burners plus a side burner
- ✓ You want griddle and warming rack included
- ✓ You prefer freestanding grill with storage and wheels

Skip This If...

- × You need a compact or highly portable grill
- × You refuse to assemble a heavy appliance
- × You plan to use charcoal or electric only
