Who It Is For

- ✓ Home grillers who want instant charcoal ignition
- ✓ Users who prefer propane canister convenience
- ✓ Outdoor cooks who sear or start fires frequently
- ✓ People who need a directed high-temperature flame

Who It Is Not For

- ✗ Indoor or enclosed-space cooking applications
- ✗ People unwilling to handle propane canisters
- ✗ Those needing a small precision butane torch

Trade Offs to Consider

---

- Very high heat needs extra safety distance
- Maximum output can reduce fine low-heat control
- Requires separate hose to use 20 lb tanks
- Heavier than compact handheld butane torches

How It Compares

- Faster ignition than lighter-fluid methods
- More portable than electric chimney starters
- Higher heat output than small butane torches

Choose This If...

- ✓ You want charcoal lit in under a minute
- ✓ You regularly use portable propane canisters
- ✓ You perform outdoor searing or frequent fire starts

Skip This If...

- ✗ You only cook indoors or in enclosed spaces
- ✗ You cannot follow propane storage and safety steps
- ✗ You need a multifunction or multi-fuel torch
