Who It Is For

- ✓ Hosts who cook for large groups regularly
- ✓ Cooks who want wood-fired flavor with app control
- ✓ Users planning long low-and-slow barbecue sessions
- ✓ Home chefs who need multi-function grilling options

Who It Is Not For

- ✗ People who need a compact portable grill
- ✗ Those without reliable outdoor electrical access
- ✗ Buyers who prefer charcoal or gas simplicity
- ✗ Users who rarely cook for more than two

Trade Offs to Consider

---

- Heavy 170.2 lb unit limits portability
- Requires hardwood pellets and electricity to run
- Large footprint needs dedicated outdoor space
- Advanced features add setup and maintenance needs

Users Say

---

● POSITIVES

- ✓ Remote app control simplifies long cooks
- ✓ Consistent temperatures from the D2 controller
- ✓ Stronger smoke flavor using Super Smoke Mode

● COMPLAINTS

- ⚠ Heavy to move once assembled
- ⚠ Needs steady pellet supply for extended cooks
- ⚠ Remote features depend on WiFi availability

How It Compares

- Larger cooking area than many pellet grills
- WiFIRE remote control not found on basic models
- 165–500°F range covers searing and low smoke
- Double-wall insulation improves weather performance

Choose This If...

- ✓ You routinely cook for groups or events
- ✓ You want wood-pellet flavor with app control
- ✓ You plan extended low-and-slow barbecue cooks
- ✓ You need a versatile grill that sears and smokes

Skip This If...

- ✗ You need a lightweight portable cooker
- ✗ You lack easy outdoor power or pellet access
- ✗ You only grill occasionally for one or two
- ✗ You prefer simpler charcoal or gas setups
